¹ The expected filing date is calculated using information generated from each listed company's historical three years' filing pattern. The process involves calculating the average number of days it takes the company to file its year end accounts, starting from January 1, over the next 3 years. For example if XYZ Plc filed its accounts as follows: Year 2015 filed on 31 January = 31 days; Year 2016 filed on 15 February = 46 days; Year 2017 filed on 28 February = 59 days. The average is 45.3 days, which makes 15 February the expected filing date. However, where the expected filing date obtained from the calculation of the average date is a date after the regulatory filing deadline, the regulatory filing deadline is the expected filing date.
